Including work from as early as 1800 to the twenty-first century, from the moral tales of Maria Edgeworth to the humorous and entertaining books of Roddy Doyle and Brendan Behan, this exhibit highlights some of the trends in children's literature as well as the various ways in which Irish life, folklore and culture have been transmitted through children's literature.

Tír na nÓg is the Land of the Youth, a mythical otherworld that features in the Fenian cycle of Irish tales.
